INTRODUCTION

This is a slightly revised version of the original Conference Room Paper submitted to the Twelfth United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice held at Salvador (Brazil) in 2010. The CRP was distributed at the Congress to its participants on a USB Stick. The content of the USB stick was saved and reviewed by Eduardo Vetere¹, who donated it to the Alliance of NGOs on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, in order to preserve the historical heritage of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, for the benefit of researchers, diplomats, crime prevention and criminal justice officials, as well as any other interested readers (Vienna, 15 June 2024).

FOREWORD

This is a Digest of all the relevant United Nations resolutions, reports, documents and publications in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, issued up to and including 2010. It is an updated and revised version of the first collection originally published as a special issue of International Review of Criminal Policy (Nos. 47 and 48), together with a slightly modified text of the Secretary-General's report submitted in 1995 to the General Assembly (A/50/432), on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the United Nations. It was further updated, reviewed and submitted to the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, held in Bangkok in 2005 to celebrate the 50th anniversary of such Congresses. Five years later, with an additional update, it was represented as a Conference Room Paper to the Twelfth Un Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, held in Salvador, Brazil, in 2010.

Crime prevention has been part of the "social" agenda of the United Nations from the very early days of the Organization, as efforts to prevent and control crime were conceived to fall under one of its main purposes stated in Article 1 of the Charter, i.e. "to achieve international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion". In fact, by its resolution 7 of 16 February 1946, the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) established the Temporary Social Commission tasked to report to it on, inter alia, "the advisability of bringing under the Council the activities in the social field that, until then, had been carried out by the League of Nations and such other activities as the work on the treatment of offenders that was being carried out by the International Penal and Penitentiary Commission".

It should be recalled, in this regard, that the League of Nations had been working on matters relating to the trafficking in women and children and the question of child welfare, which inevitably included work concerning juvenile delinquency. The League of Nations had been broadening its interests in the 1930's, particularly by endorsing in 1934 the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, which had been agreed upon by the International Penal and Penitentiary Commission. A much more elaborated version of such Rules would be adopted by the First United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and Treatment of Offenders, held at Geneva, from 22 August to 3 September 1955, the implementation of which would become a central feature of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme. By the establishment of the Temporary Social Commission and by subsequently taking action on its recommendations, ECOSOC placed the United Nations firmly in a stream of events going back to almost two Centuries ago, when the international congresses in the correctional field had begun.

In 1948, a Secretariat Unit, originally known as the Social Defence Section, was established to work in that area as part of the Social Development Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs; while in 1950 the functions of the International Penal and Penitentiary Commission were formally transferred to the United Nations, including the organization of the quinquennial Congresses on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (General Assembly resolution 415 (V), Annex). Thus, the First United Nations Congress was organized in Geneva in 1955, followed by the Second held in London in 1960 and by the Third held in Stockholm in 1965. After the Fourth United Nations Congress, held in Kyoto in 1970, the Section became the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch. The Branch, after the Sixth Congress held in Caracas in 1980, was transferred from New York City to Vienna as part of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs (CSDHA/DESA). At the beginning of January 1996, as a follow-up to the recommendations of the Versailles and Naples Ministerial Conferences, as well as those of the Ninth Congress held in Cairo in 1995, the Branch was upgraded to a Division; while at the end of 1997 it was further elevated to the Centre for International Crime Prevention as part of the newly established United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention. Further to a major restructuring in 2003, its work has been fully integrated with that of the Drug Control Programme, under three Divisions and more than 20 field offices, as part of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime. This Branch, after the Sixth Congress held in Caracas in 1980, was transferred from New York City to Vienna as part of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs (CSDHA/DESA). At the beginning of January 1996, as a follow-up to the recommendations of the Versailles and Naples Ministerial Conferences, as well as those of the Ninth Congress held in Cairo in 1995, the Branch was upgraded to a Division; while at the end of 1997 it was further elevated to the Centre for International Crime Prevention as part of the newly established United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention. Further to a major restructuring in 2003, its work has been fully integrated with that of the Drug Control Programme, under three Divisions and more than 20 field offices, as part of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime.²

A major effort at reorganizing and reinvigorating the Programme resulted in the adoption of General Assembly resolution 46/152 of 18 December 1991 endorsing the "Statement of principles and programme of action of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme" recommended by the Ministerial Meeting on the Creation of an Effective United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, held in Versailles from 21 to 23 November 1991 as contained in document A/46/703.

The most important change resulting from the adoption of General Assembly resolution 46/152 was the replacement of the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control -as an Expert Body- by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice as an inter-governmental body and as a new functional commission of the Economic and Social Council. The main functions of the basic elements of the Programme (the Commission, the Congresses and the Secretariat) are detailed in the Annex of General Assembly resolution 46/152, which also refers to the role of the interregional and regional institutes, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the scientific community.³

This Digest shows how the content and the structure of the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme has evolved, throughout the years, providing a detailed summary of what has been done in the past seven and a half decades in terms of policy advice to the major political organs involved (primarily the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council) through the UN Congresses and, the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and its various predecessor expert bodies, culminating with the successful negotiations and the adoption of the United Nations Conventions against Transnational Organized Crime with its three Protocols (G.A. res. 55/25 of 15 November 2000 with Annexes and G.A. res. 55/255 of 31 May 2001 with Annex), as well to the United Nations Convention against Corruption (G.A. res. 58/4 of 31 October 2003 with Annex). These treaties, which have been ratified and are being applied by hundreds of countries all over the world, have also appropriate review mechanisms for implementation, as monitored by the respective Conferences of Parties.⁴

That the Congresses have had a significant role in the development of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme is also apparent from a cursory review of this Digest. In fact, they have provided valuable networking opportunities for thousands of criminal justice governmental experts attending them, together representatives of the academic community and the civil society. They have not only adopted important crime prevention and criminal justice Standards and Norms,⁵ but also identified emerging trends and recommended innovative and practical policy approaches for the strengthening of international cooperation and the provision of technical assistance to countries in need. In this connection, they have substantively contributed to the progressive evolution of international criminal law, thus promoting and consolidating the rule of law at the national and international levels, with the "legacy of previous Congresses being the source of inspiration and further debate for the following ones".⁶

Regarding the presentation of the various documents/reports/studies, Chapter I of the Digest contains what are generally called legislative mandates, i.e., the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, which are presented in chronological order, starting with the most recent ones. The same approach has been followed in the presentation of reports, studies and other documents in the sections that follow. Some of the resolutions, such as General Assembly resolution 46/152 contain Political Declarations and Action Plans dealing the structural organization of the Programme. Others contain Declarations or formally approve Standards and Norms that States are exhorted to implement. Yet others set agenda and priorities. A number of the several resolutions also deal with the question of how effectively to implement the recommendations made by the United Nations policy-making bodies, at the national and international levels, including the practical application of existing United Nations Standards and Norms, both de jure and de facto. Chapter I also contains, for the first time, the more recent resolutions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs adopted during the last years, in view of the inter-linkages between illicit drug trafficking, money laundering, transnational organized crime and terrorism.

Chapter II contains a listing of the reports submitted to legislative and functional bodies, as well as two major conferences and congresses. Included in the material submitted to the General Assembly are documents constituting a periodic stocktaking of the work of the Programme as a whole, as well as reports on specific areas of activity, such as measures to strengthen international cooperation in combating organized crime. There are also other reports discussing efforts to follow up on the deliberations of the various congresses. While the documents submitted to the Security Council are mainly related to the issue of international terrorism, the material considered by the Economic and Social Council includes reports on the organizational priorities of the Programme, as well as a number of periodic reports on a question that has long been on the agenda of the Programme, that of capital punishment. In addition, Chapter II contains the documents reviewed by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, in its eighteen sessions held at Vienna from 1992 to 2009, as well as the documents considered by the more recent sessions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs.

Chapter III contains the relevant documentation of the Ad-Hoc Committees on the elaboration of the United Nations Conventions against Transnational Organized Crime with its three Protocols, and against Corruption, as well as that related to the Conference of the Parties to the Transnational Organized Crime Convention with its three Protocols (COP/UNTOC) and to the Conference of State Parties to the Convention against Corruption (COSP/UNCAC). A sub-chapter on the Ministerial Meetings and Conferences lists the documentation of the two high-level Signing Conferences of Merida (2003) and Palermo (2000), as well as the World Ministerial Conference on Organized Transnational Crime, held at Naples from 21 to 23 November 1994, and the Ministerial Meeting on the Creation of an Effective United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, held at Versailles from 21 to 23 November 1991. Of considerable historical interest is the material listing all the documentation of the past UN Congresses, as well as that related to the eleven sessions of the Committee on Crime Prevention and Control, held between 1972 and 1990, including its predecessors, the Advisory Committee of Experts on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (1966-1971), the Ad Hoc Advisory Committee of Experts (1953-1963), and the International Group of Experts (1949-1950). Also included are the documents of the United Nations Consultative Group on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (1961-1968) and its predecessor, the European Regional Consultative Group (1952-1958). Since, until 1983, these expert committees and groups reported to the Economic and Social Council through the Commission for Social Development, there is also a section listing the relevant documentation of that body.

W. Mueller and Eduardo Vetere, The UN's Global Gatherings on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice: Some Basic Maxims, HEUNI Newsletter, January 2000, Special Supplement.

Chapter VI is devoted to the regular publications of the Programme, such as the Forum on Crime and Society, the International Review of Criminal Policy and the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Newsletter; with Chapter V listing major studies conducted in various areas of concern.

While most of the more recent documents listed in Chapters I and II may be available online through the Official Documents System (ODS) in the six working languages of the United Nations at the following website: <http://documents.un.org/>, in general most of the publications issued by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) – as listed in Chapters III, IV and V – can be found at the following website: <http://www.unodc.org/>.

Finally, Chapter VI contains the publications of the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute and the regional institutes; while Chapter VII covers the publications of the other institutes associated to the United Nations Programme Network (PNI). The documents and studies listed in Chapters VI and VII can be obtained by contacting directly the Institutes at the addresses mentioned in those chapters. More updated information on the PNI can be found on the PNI NEWSLETTER, issues 01 to 05, pinewsletter@tijthailand.org, as well as on the annual reports submitted to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

It is hoped that the distribution of this Digest at the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, as a complement to the complete documentation from the First to the Eleventh United Nations Congresses (1955 – 2005) contained on the USB stick, will be useful to libraries, universities, other academic and scientific institutions and criminal justice schools around the world, thus contributing to enhance the professional level of criminal justice education, drawing on existing United Nations Standards and Norms. It is also hoped that it will be of help to policy makers, researchers, scholars and to the international community as a whole in their efforts to further strengthen international cooperation in crime prevention and criminal justice, as well as to further advance the supremacy of the rule of law, both nationally and internationally.

As the previous version of the Compilation, this Digest has been prepared by Eduardo Vetere, Executive Secretary of the Eighth, Ninth and Eleventh Congresses and former Director of the Division for Treaty Affairs, UNODC, with the dedicated and invaluable assistance of Emil Wandzilak, Research Assistant and custodian of the UNODC library.
